

Look Up to See What the Weather Will Be

Go behind the scenes of weather forecasting with TV meteorologist Guy Brown!

Guy shows you exactly what weather forecasting is like—from reading satellite images at the studio, to going on location in inclement weather conditions. Learn how humans and animals alike predict and respond to changes in the weather. Guy introduces readers to cloud identification techniques, meteorology tools, and weather safety. By the end, you'll be ready to become a meteorologist!

Praise for Look Up to See What the Weather Will Be

“A terrific introduction to weather and the tools of forecasting... I highly recommend this book for young readers, and for parents and teachers as well.”

—Spencer Christian, Weather Forecaster, ABC7 News/KGO-TV, San Francisco

“A perfect book to help kids understand how and why meteorologists engineer weather forecasts. Guy Brown shows readers how humans and animals are universally affected by the weather. Eye-catching and inspiring!”

—Jason Lindsey, Hooked On Science, Meteorologist, STEM Certified Educator

“This charming and informative book... covers not just the meteorological tools, technology, teamwork, and day-to-day activities associated with his work, but also his passion for what he does and the considerable impact of weather on all living things.”

—Dan Levy, reviewer, Tillywig Toy & Media Awards

About the Author and Illustrator

GUY BROWN has wanted to be a weather forecaster since the age of nine. He made his debut as a TV meteorologist in Cheyenne, WY, and later worked for a local TV station in Madison, WI. He can be found on-air today as the morning news weather anchor in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area of MN. This is his first book.

MARIO LUGO resides in Sao Paulo, Brazil, where he established himself as an illustrator and tattoo artist. He has taken painting, drawing, and computer science classes, but is largely self-taught. Look Up to See What the Weather Will Be is his first book.
